

CQ Water Services

RIGHT: These three pumps, owned by John Mactaggort, Bears Lagoon, Moura, supply three 60ha (150ac) pivot irrigators.

THERE is a new name on the block when it comes to water services and supplies in Central Queensland.

Formed 12 months ago, CQ Water Services has already gone through a tremendous growth period and is setting its sights on bigger and better things across the region.

Run by established industry identity Greg Cross, CQ Water Services caters for a range of water needs.

And with a new premises on Lakes Creek Road, Rockhampton, the business has also been boosted with the help of Adam Trask.

Both Mr Cross and Mr Trask are familiar names in the water services industry, and are excited to be continuing their association with "all things water".

Mr Cross has 20 years' experience in the industry, while Mr Trask has been involved for five years.

"The majority of our work is within the beef industry, but we also do council work and are involved in subdivision pump stations," Mr Trask said.

"The grazing industry is our core line of work, although we have diversified into smaller irrigation and travelling irrigation," he said.

For graziers, the core products of interest have been earmarked as solar equipment, pumping gear, and centre pivots.

The business covers a massive geographical footprint, ranging from above Marlborough in the north, south to Biloela and Moura, and west to Comet – and all places in between.

"We do jobs across Queensland and across Australia," Mr Cross said.

Mr Cross started his irrigation career with Southern Cross and worked in Emerald, Toowoomba, Tamworth and Brisbane with the company before relocating to Rockhampton in 1995.

Ten years later, after the closure of Southern Cross, Mr Cross and his wife Carissa and their children established the new business, with a view to running it with continued passion, expertise, and professionalism.

With extensive expertise in all things irrigation, Mr Cross has even been to Israel on a study tour and to the Solomon Islands with Southern Cross.

In the past four years, Mr Cross estimates he has been involved in more than $7 million worth of irrigation projects in Central Queensland, including the recent conclusion of an $800,000 job at Dingo, and a $1.1 million project at Baralaba.

Further down the track, Mr Cross will also have his pilot's licence, which will enable him to cover a larger region at a greater speed and better service his clients.

● For more information, phone (07) 4922 2974.

www.lowara.com

We take care of your fields

Lowara is a partner for anyone who must irrigate large areas. Lowara submersible pumps for wells are compact, lightweight, and easy to service, available in stainless steel with heads of up to 500 m, and particularly suited for applications in civil and industrial water systems and sprinkler irrigation systems. Excellence in water technology.

SURFACE PUMPS

SUBMERSIBLE PUMPS

✓ SUBMERGED PUMPS

PRESSURE BOOSTER SETS

ITT

Engineered for life

1370005OCLP

The team at CQ Water Services – Greg and Carissa Cross and Adam Trask.

CQ Water Services cqws@optusnet.com.au

Pivots and Linears

Congratulations On Your First Anniversary

69 Lakes Creek Rd North Rockhampton 4701

Ph 0749 222974

Mob 0400 287744

1369906 OCLP